DiscussIT Topic 6: Where is our country headed?

Discuss IT Topic: Over the last week, our country has had growing concerns on immigration bans, border safety, and executive orders that remind us of issues that have been plaguing our country for years. Now that Trump has been elected President, there has been people threatening to blow up the White House, human right protests, and a plethora of other sensitive subject matters that are very compelling to individual groups of people. Why have these issues come up now as we head into a time in which it seems no one is going to be happy with the outcomes? Will this create a split in this country and place citizens against one another when it comes to their views? In your opinion, what other topics are at the forefront of concern? Explain...

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

Recently, Donald Trump was elected as President. Obviously, every election people get upset that their candidate didn't win but this election year is completely different. People are posing riots and marches. A large percentage on the population see Trump as a racist and a womanizer. I mean, maybe he is? Granted, I feel as though people need to accept the fact that Trump is our President. By all means though go ahead and have your marches and riots, voice your worries and problems that you have with the presidency – maybe that'll make Trump think before he speaks next time he's at a public event. But overall, I don't think that all the complaining will result in anything. It also doesn't help that most people against Trump are so vocal about it – I've seen a lot of people who oppose Trump straight up force their opinions onto others around them whom are oblivious or supporters of Trump. Never a nice thing to do.
